

Privacy Policy

Last updated: 1 December August 2021

Family Planning NSW respects your right to privacy and we are committed to preserving it as such.

This policy explains how we manage your personal information and the steps we take to protect it.

Collection of non-personal information through our website

Site visit information

Site visit information is collected about your visit to this website. This may include your server address, the date and time of your visit, the pages you visited, the previous sites you visited and the type of device, browser or operating system used to visit the site. This information is not considered personal information, as it does not reveal your identity.

This information is used and disseminated in an anonymous, aggregated for purposes such as statistical analysis and to assist us to improve the functionality and usability of our website.

Cookies

A cookie is a small piece of data that a computer received from a web server which is then returned to the web server without changing or altering the data. The purpose of a cookie is to record data such as what time a visit occurs, whether the visit has been to the site before and what website or search engine the visitor was referred from. Cookies are not intended to identify individual users.

We use cookies to analyse and hold session information. This enables the web server you are using to remember who you are by maintaining server variables linked to your session.
